Ka Shui Group leads its Silicon Valley based subsidiary Topanga plasma lighting to Hong Kong Science Park Phase 3

(9 January 2014 – DLK Advisory)

Ka Shui International Holdings Limited is pleased to announce that on 9 January 2014, the Group has lead its subsidiary, Topanga Asia Limited, to Hong Kong Science Park Phase 3 and set up its first R&D centre of plasma lighting in Asia.

Ka Shui Group is a leading solutions provider in technology products and services. Apart from its principal activities in the manufacturing of zinc, magnesium and aluminium alloy die casting and plastic injection moulding, it strives to continue its efforts in developing green technologies and energy-saving lighting products. In September 2013, the Group acquired the Silicon Valley based Advanced Plasma Lighting (“APL™”) related R&D technologies and products for commercial and industrial purposes. This upcoming R&D centre in Hong Kong Science Park will further enhance the commercialization of plasma lighting.

During the CEO Exchange Forum in the engaging ceremony of the Phase 3 with Mr. Allen Ma, CEO of Hong Kong Science & Technology Parks Corporation, Mr. Lee Yuen Fat, Chairman of Ka Shui Group said, “Hong Kong Science Park, with its outstanding R&D facilities, aims to bring together a number technological industries to promote the exchange of innovative ideas and expertise.” Advanced plasma lighting technology, with its strengths in high lumen output, high-efficiency and durability, is mainly used in energy-saving lighting applications and it is expected that the demand for plasma lighting will continue to grow. With the establishment of a R&D centre of plasma lighting in Hong Kong Science Park, the Group will speed up its own R&D and technologies and strive to develop plasma lighting as a new growth driver of Ka Shui Group.
